

Reaction To First "Eggs" Out Of Sky Told By Dave White

IS NOW IN ENGLAND

Veteran Bill White has received the following interesting letter from one of his sons, Dave, in barracks, somewhere in England, on Aug. 15.

"We arrived at Glasgow on the 1st of August and we are now stationed in a big military camp. I guess you know where. We had a good crossing, except for the last two days, it was rougher than enough. We had two British battleships all the way across and when we were three days out we had a convoy of 12 destroyers.

"We were lucky. We came over on the Empress of Australia. We made the trip in eight days. There was a big convoy, about eight ships, including the Duchess of York, Monarch of Bermuda, Antonia, Pilsudski, Aurora.

"The second night we were here I was 30 minutes late getting in. I got 14 days C. B. and 14 pack drills. So I'm still C. B. You have to watch your step, because any man who gets more than seven days detention goes to the glass-house about ten miles from here. The scenery around here is beautiful. I never thought England looked like this.

"We have had half a dozen air-raid warnings since we got here, but yesterday was the first air-raid we had and had two of them. I was on air-raid warden duty. And when they came the second time, they dropped some eggs about 200 yards away on our parade-ground. But nobody was hurt.

"I was scared and I don't mind admitting it. There were eight Heinkel bombers and they had about ten Spitfires on their tails. Yesterday British airmen brought down 146 Germans. It sounds fantastic but it's true.

"As soon as I get leave I am going to see Aunt Mary. We are supposed to get five days leave soon.

"Jim was up about a week ago. He's on reconnaissance patrol. He rides a motorcycle with a side-car. The gunner in the side-car uses a Vickers aircraft mounting. They look for German parachutists."

The municipal council may submit the question to the voters or must do so if they receive a petition to that effect signed by five per cent of the voters.

Any vote taken will apply to both council and school boards. The "Local Government Extension Act" is as follows:

Interpretation

1. In this Act,—

"Local Board"

(a) "local board" shall mean school board, board of education, public utility commission, trustees or board of trustees of a police village, and any other board, commission, committee, body or local authority established or exercising any power or authority under any Act with respect to any of the affairs or purposes, including school purposes, of a municipality, any of the members of which are elected to office for a definite period of time; and

'CONSERVATION' PICNIC WILL BE AT VIVIAN

At a recent meeting of the sub-committee on reforestation for York county council, it was decided to hold a field day or picnic at Vivian on Wednesday, Sept. 11, commencing at 10 a.m., E. S. T., when the popular features of the 1938 field day will be repeated with many new attractions.

The program will begin at 10 a.m., standard time, with a tour of the 1,400 acre county forest, which was started in 1924 and will include a demonstration of forest conservation as well as reforestation. Three trucks are being equipped with seats, so that 60 people will be able to take the tour at a time.

A complete program of sports is being arranged to take care of the odd minutes that visitors might have to put in between tours, including softball, horse-shoes and races for the children and a free draw for two war savings certificates.

The educational features are being stressed this year and the committee has arranged for tents with educational displays put on by the Ontario departments of forestry and agriculture. Following the lunch hour, there will be two short addresses, over a public address amplifier.

The basket lunch will be picnic style at noon, with hot water provided free and in addition, dinner will be served on the grounds. Of course a picnic would not be a picnic without a booth. Permission is being secured from the inspectors for schools to attend, in view of the fact there are no school fairs. There is no charge for admission or parking.

Chairman W. H. Pugsley of Sutton is being assisted by Secretary Jas. Rennie, reeve of Markham, who is also chairman of the Ontario Conservation Association, A. H. Richardson of the Ontario forestry branch, and W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative.

WILL SELL BONDS

The new war bonds will be sold by W. E. Young at Young's Fair, Main St., Newmarket.

TRAINING CAMP STAFF IS NOW AT SCHOOL IN TORONTO

WORK HASTENS ON

Lieut.-Col. R. B. Harkness, D. S. O., has been appointed officer commanding the military training camp at Newmarket.

Col. Geary, V. C., an Imperial officer (not the one-time mayor of Toronto), will be second-in-command.

Lieut.-Col. J. Murray Muir, an officer who represented York county with distinction in the first great war, will be senior company commander.

Col. E. B. Dodgson will be camp adjutant.

Colonel Harkness has been granted leave of absence from his duties as natural gas commissioner in the Ontario department of mines to take charge of the camp for the duration of the war.

Altogether there will be a staff of 30 officers and about 175 other ranks. Several hundred officers and other ranks of the non-permanent active militia are in training in Toronto preparatory to taking over their duties as training officers and personnel for the four Ontario training camps. One hundred and fifty men were still wanted this week to train as N. C. O's.

It is also understood that, according to present plans, the four training camps in Ontario

SCHOOLS GET UNDER WAY
AGAIN AS SEPTEMBER
COMES

Registration at Newmarket high school was 310 on Tuesday, with a few more coming in on Wednesday. Eight or ten students registered and then returned home to work on the farm for the next few weeks.

Two new teachers are on Principal J. B. Bastedo's staff. Kenneth Mawson, Toronto, is just graduated from O. C. E. and teaches English and history. H. W. Garrett, Toronto, who taught at Sutton last year, teaches commercial work and geography.

There were 507 registrations at Newmarket public schools, according to Principal H. A. Jackson. This figure includes 55 beginners, and is likely to be increased, as several war guests are definitely expected.

There is one new teacher, Laurie W. Melbourne, Bradford, formerly teaching at S.S. 4, West Gwillimbury. He is in charge of grade VI at King George school.

St. John's school opened Tuesday morning with a registration of 53 pupils, which exceeds the attendance of last year by eight. There are 27 boys and 26 girls. As yet there are no refugee children attending.

The work at the Newmarket training camp continued to go forward rapidly, with a great many men employed. The scene is really worth a visit.

It is understood that the Knights of Columbus will look after the recreational side of the Newmarket camp.

A medical officer for the Newmarket camp has not been named as yet. The general policy is to appoint returned men where possible. If a selection were made locally, that would mean appointment of Dr. C. R. Boulding, former mayor of Aurora, or of Dr. J. C. R. Edwards, of Newmarket. The medical officer will be a uniformed member of the camp staff.

Lieut. Fisher, Sergt. Gerrard and Norman Farr, superintendent of construction, are in charge at the camp.

TRAINING PLAN BOARD NAMED FOR DISTRICT

When the compulsory training plan gets under way, appeals may be made to the Toronto district board. The board will hear objections to training at all and also requests for training at a different time. Employers in some instances will have a chance to submit plans for the training of their employees.

The board is as follows: chairman, Mr. Justice John G. G. Gillanders, Osgoode Hall; members, Richard Coulton Berkshaw, president of Toronto board of trade; F. C. Ridley, Hamilton, Divisional registrar, R. A. Irwin, Toronto.

SPENCER CROFT DIES IN HIS 87TH YEAR

A harness-maker for a Toronto department store for 16 years, Spencer Croft died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. Hodge, 56 Millard Ave., with whom he has lived since his retirement nine years ago, on Tuesday, after an illness lasting six months.

Born in Markham township on Sept. 17, 1853, he married Alice M. Richardson, who predeceased him nine years ago.

Surviving is one son, Roy Croft, Toronto, one daughter, Mrs. J. Hodge, Newmarket, and three grandsons, Delbert Croft of Toronto and Frank and Harry Hodge of Newmarket.

LOCAL GUIDES HELP BUY LIFE-BOAT, AMBULANCES

First Newmarket Company of Girl Guides will hold their first meeting of the season on Tuesday evening, Sept. 10, from 7-9 p.m., in the gym of the United church. Girls between the ages of 10 to 16 years may join.

Guides of the British Empire have contributed to a fund for the purchase of two air ambulances and a motor life-boat for his majesty's forces. The objective set was $100,000 but $210,000 was turned in, so other ambulances were purchased with the surplus.

The chief commissioner of Canadian Guides has received word that one of these ambulances was used in the evacuation of Dunkirk.

LEAD SCHEDULE

Alex. Webster's Goldshirts are going to give the home crowd a sparkling display of softball tomorrow evening.

The game starts at 6.45 p.m. at the fair grounds.

The opposing squad will be Thornhill, which won the right to meet Newmarket girls in the finals in a 10-8 sudden death victory over Agincourt at Unionville last evening.

The return game with Thornhill will be at Thornhill on Monday evening.

Newmarket girls finished on top of the heap in the pre-play-off schedule, with eight wins, three losses and one tie. Thornhill and Agincourt tied, with six wins, five losses and one tie each. Unionville brought up the rear, with one win, nine losses and a tie.

The Websterettes are confident of the outcome of their duel with Thornhill. In four games this year they won three times, losing one game by a 6-5 score, and in four meetings with Thornhill last year Newmarket won all four times.

There should be a big crowd on the bleachers tomorrow night to see softball as "she is played" or as "he" plays it.

Human Bones Found When Workmen Look For Drain

CHILDREN OF ALEXANDER
MUIR SCHOOL ENJOY
HOLIDAY

Children of Miss Nellie Holladay's Alexander Muir school are enjoying a day's holiday.

The roots of an elm tree found their way into a drain and made conditions in the school unsanitary. After a futile attempt last evening to cure the trouble, school had to be dismissed today.

No one knew where the drains were and in looking for the sewer today workmen dug up several human bones, which they carefully replaced and recovered.

The Alexander Muir schoolyard was once a graveyard, from which the remains were transferred over 50 years ago to Newmarket's first Methodist church was situated south of where the present school is and the old school was situated north of the present building.

Would Pay Canada To House Citizens Well, Pastor Says

HIS GLAD TO BE HOME
AGAIN AFTER THREE MONTHS

Rev. R. R. McMath, pastor of Trinity United church, is home again after a summer of illness and convalescence in western Canada and latterly at Bobcaygeon.

Following is the interesting message with which Mr. McMath greeted his congregation through "Joyful News," the church calendar.

Dear Friend: Here I am on the job again! Am I ever glad to be back home. After an absence of three months it gives one a strange feeling to walk into his own home. There is a sense of satisfaction and security about it that you can't find anywhere else. After sharing hotels, hospitals, and summer cottages, it is nice to sit down by your own fireside. The poet was right when he wrote, "Be it ever so humble, there is no place like home." The part of that statement that worries me is the word "humble." When one has wandered around as much as I have, one asks, why should there be humble homes? I have seen the little Irish thatched cottage with its earthen floor on the hills of Donegal; the log cabin of old Quebec; the windowless shacks of the colored people of North Carolina; and the lonely shacks of the rancher and homesteader in the great north-west, and I have wondered, WHY? If the Englishman's home is his castle, why can't we give him a decent castle?

Nothing in the world can so lift a man's spirits as a nice comfortable home. The nation could have no finer asset than a series of magnificent homes. Since a year ago today our dominion has spent half a billion on defence, and all necessary, too. But, suppose we had spent that on the homes of Canada five years ago? What would it have meant to the happiness of our people? When we passed half a dozen homes all unpainted and drab-looking, it just stirred one's soul to see a nice little cottage all painted and surrounded with flowers.

Of course, it may be the spirit inside that is expressed outside.

DRY CANTEN

In spite of the fact that the plans—probably standard plans for all camps—for the Newmarket training camp call for construction of a dry and a wet canteen, The Era understands that the Newmarket camp will be dry. May we hasten to congratulate those responsible—the department of national defence and the authorities of military district No. 2—on the good judgment displayed.

To these camps will go, it is true, some who are already in the habit of drinking beer, but to them also will go a great number of young men who have never tasted beer. And many of them will be away from home for the first time.

The training plan is for the mobilization of the man-power of the nation, and not for the demoralization of its young manhood. We therefore think that the government and the military authorities will find that they have made a very popular decision, so far as the Newmarket camp is concerned, and also one which will bring a maximum of satisfaction to themselves.

We understand that all four Ontario camps will be dry. We don't know about the others. But we do know that Newmarket is dry, that Newmarket police have made a conscientious and reasonably effective effort to keep Newmarket dry, and that the military authorities will receive every co-operation in their effort to keep the boys and the drink away from each other for the short 30 days in camp.

Whether or not the permanent officers and the training staff have their own canteen is not, we think, a matter of particular concern to Newmarket. That is a matter of army policy. A hitch-hiking soldier whom we picked up the other day said that the curse of army life was that there were only two diversions, "wine and women," and he said that there were hundreds of young fellows learning to drink in the camp where he was stationed. We can all be glad that Newmarket is going to have a different type of camp. And may we suggest that there is much that Newmarket people can do to make pleasant the stay here of training officers and trainees.

A MATTER OF WAGES

Many people seem in doubt as to whether the military training camp will benefit Newmarket financially. We agree with the town council that it will. Certainly quite a few citizens are obtaining highly remunerative work for a few weeks. Incidentally, there is quite a bit of criticism of the government largesse in the matter of wages. Employees of the town of Newmarket worked in one ditch last week, taking water connections to the camp, at 35 cents an hour, while a few feet away employees of the dominion of Canada worked in a similar ditch, within the camp, doing similar work, at 55 cents an hour. That was for laborers. Other employees worked at rates which ran up to $1.10 an hour for electricians.

(They worked on a former farm, typical of many York county farms where men toil for ten and 15 cents an hour.)

There are two sides to the argument. One is that the men who are getting the good wages are getting them for only a short time and need them. The government is also setting a good example to other employers by paying good wage rates. On the other hand, the government is setting this good example with public money, putting a millstone of debt around the necks of those it now pays so well, and around the necks of the soldiers and soldiers' dependents whom it does not pay so well (though their services are likely to be much greater). We leave it with you.

DOING ONE'S OWN THINKING

In its first editorial last Saturday the Toronto Globe and Mail, criticizing Toronto board of education members for wishywashyness on the subject of schooling for British evacuees, commended one trustee for saying: "I refuse to yield to any government, dominion, provincial or municipal, the right to do my thinking." The comment was: "Congratulations, Dr. Butt!" The next editorial dealt with remarks of Prof. Frank Underhill, of the University of Toronto, who also refuses to yield to any government the right to do his own thinking. Prof. Underhill, who comes in for condemnation from time to time for his forthrightness, had provokingly interpreted the new Canada-United States defence agreement as a Canadian intention of "never going back to putting all our eggs again in one British basket."

We were delighted to see that the Globe and Mail was not so inconsistent as to condemn Prof. Underhill. In good humor, it instead portrayed Prof. Underhill as a Canadian Sir Stafford Cripps, now British ambassador to Russia, and painted a dark future for him as "Canadian minister to the Vichy government," adding, "And serve him right, we say."

Prof. Underhill would be, as the Globe and Mail in its third editorial of the day in question described James H. R. Cromwell, "an undiplomatic diplomat." The difference is that while Cromwell is a few months ahead of public opinion in the U.S.A., Prof. Underhill keeps a few years ahead of Canadian public opinion. Unless someone gets ahead of the crowd and leads, the crowd never gets anywhere. Statesmen depend on radicals to break the ice for them. President Roosevelt is known to favor turning over to Britain so-called "over-age" U. S. destroyers, but it is said that he has not yet made a public declaration to that effect. He is letting the Pershings, and the Cromwells and the William Allen Whites break the ice and form public opinion for him.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Britain is making good use of ice-breakers too. The Globe and Mail, in the Underhill editorial, good-naturedly says that "the city of Toronto is blessed with rather more than its fair share of intellectuals" but it is on the spade-work of such that Mr. Churchill leans when he proposes a British union with France and when, more recently, he says that the United States and the British Commonwealth "will have to be mixed up together in some of their affairs for mutual and general advantage." Mr. Churchill adds:

For my own part, looking out upon the future, I do not view the process with any misgivings. No one can stop it. Like the Mississippi, it just keeps rolling along. Let it roll. Let it roll on in full flood, inexorable, irresistible, to broader lands and better days.

It looks as though even Britain does not want to go back "to putting all our eggs in one British basket."

RED CROSS AND FEDERATED APPEAL

Later this month the Canadian Red Cross will make an appeal for funds. The public will not say, "What did you do with what I gave you?" for the public knows that the Red Cross has done much and done it well. Fortunately, there has been no great call on surgical supplies for our Canadian troops, but during the first year of the war the Red Cross has had to accumulate supplies of all kinds at a great many different points in case of need. The Canadian Red Cross does not confine its humanity to Canadians, of course, and has been helping to prepare emergency supplies in case of heavy aerial bombardment of Britain. Recently the Canadian Red Cross was asked to provide 5,000 food parcels a week for British and Canadian prisoners of war in Germany. The Canadian Red Cross is also helping to care for 100,000 European refugees in Britain.

We don't know how much money the Red Cross will be seeking. No one can set definite limits to Red Cross needs, for no one can say what great emergencies may arise suddenly—involving thousands or even millions of persons. The Red Cross will be justified in asking people for all they can give.

What people can give depends to some extent on what other demands will be made upon them. Our Peel county neighbor, the town of Brampton, is launching on Sept. 23 (the Red Cross date) a "war charities campaign" for $15,000. Earlier this year Brampton, we believe, had campaigns for the Salvation Army and the Y.M.C.A., but this appeal will be for the Red Cross, Canadian Legion, Y.M.C.A., Navy League and Salvation Army war services, as well as for such organizations as the I.O.E., Victorian Order of Nurses, Peel Memorial Hospital, and the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. We note that one citizen has made an advance gift of $1,000, ear-marked for the Red Cross.

We suppose that the requirements of all these organizations would be totalled up to secure the campaign objective of $15,000. Then all organizations would share in the proceeds of the drive, in proportion to their requirements. The difficulty we see is in getting all organizations to agree on the requirements of each. We believe that for community chests or federated charities appeals the share of each organization is based on the amount of money it raised before it entered the federation, the amount of work it did in the past year and the probable demands on it during the next year.

What would be the effect of ear-marking a gift for one particular organization, as the Brampton citizen has done? It would show the particular citizen's sentiment, but it could hardly be allowed to affect the agreed-upon division of the campaign proceeds. Persons who wanted their gifts to go to a certain organization would have to make the gift direct to the organization and make another gift or no gift to the federated appeal.

BLOWING THE NOSE

A soldier may step out of line to blow his nose (he takes two paces forward and then blows his nose with a flourish of his khaki handkerchief, according to our childish memory of soldiers at drill), but it seems that he may not fail to do so to capture a Nazi. It is hard to believe but that is the way it happened "somewhere in Muskoka" on Sunday. An old friend of ours, Ivers Kelly, reports the believe-it-or-not incident for a "Toronto newspaper. Like a good reporter, he makes no comment. We won't either, but we reprint the story as told.

Norman Phillips, a Toronto news reporter en route home from the Sudbury district, was responsible for the early recapture of Kempe. Phillips gave the German a ride in his car, and drove into Huntsville. On Main Street he saw 120 officers and men of Company A of the Algonquin Regiment parading from All Saints' Anglican church, under command of Captain Irvin Kennedy. The company was one block away from the municipal building, where the salute was to be taken at 11.50 a.m., daylight time, by Col. Duncan Forrest.

Soldier Refuses Aid

Phillips called to the last man in the parade, Sergeant Harold Langstaff, that he believed he had an escaped German prisoner beside him in the car. "Sergeant," he shouted, as he slowed down to the pace of the marching soldiers, "would you please check this man in the car with me. He has no identification, he speaks very poor English and I presume he is an escaped prisoner."

Sergeant Langstaff was close behind his superior officer and replied: "Please tell Lieutenant Willoughby, who is just ahead. He is in charge of this platoon."

Phillips stopped his car and ran up to Willoughby, telling him he had an escaped German prisoner in his car. Meanwhile, the German got out and started walking away from the car. The lieutenant told Phillips he had better go and tell the local police. "Because it was a police matter."

Meanwhile, Company "A" continued its parade. Phillips, a stranger in Huntsville, found Chief Constable William Charles Carson, at the municipal building and told him of the German prisoner. Chief Carson quickly commandeered a passing motor-car, jumped into it and followed Phillips' car to where the German had been.

"I found him about four blocks away from where he was last seen," said Chief Carson. "He was on a side street. I took off my cap as I passed him in the car, but he was looking straight ahead. Then just as I got ahead of him I stepped out, put my cap on, and stopped directly in front of him, facing him."

"He stopped immediately, clicked his heels together, muttered something that sounded like, 'You lucky.' I searched him for a weapon, but he had none. I asked him if he was a German and he said: 'No.'"

"I told him to get in the car with me—I still don't know the motorist's name who helped me—and we came back to the municipal building. . . ."

The German admitted he was an escaped prisoner and gave his name and age. Sergeant Langstaff, who had recognized the German's shoes as army boots when he saw him on the street, came to the police chief as soon as the parade was over to make sure the German had been captured. Langstaff and Corporal W. C. Knight, the only two Orillia men in Company A, were assigned to guard the prisoners until internment camp officials arrived.

After such a story it is rather an anticlimax to point out that the newspaper must date its article from "somewhere in Muskoka" but may go on to mention such towns as Huntsville and Orillia. Similarly, the press freely refers to the fact that Canadian troops are in Iceland, and Newmarket boys writing home may describe the unusual country in which they are stationed, but they cannot tell the home folks that the land of the hot springs, the 24-hour day and the diffident girls is called Iceland.

THE CHUMS ARE SURROUNDED BY AN ANTI-HAWK CONVOY

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"I've just been roaming the fields to see what I could see," Junior Chickadee told his friends as he joined them in some trees at the edge of the woods.

"What an awful day to pick to roam!" Nutty Nuthatch responded. "It's been raining so long and steadily that I'm getting really soaked through. We've had rather a dull morning here in the woods, though. Who did you see on your travels?"

"Well, I saw quite a lot of Bobolinks up in an alfalfa field," replied the young Chickadee. "There were a great many dull yellow birds and brownish sparrow-like birds together, whom I didn't recognize, so, of course, I had to ask them who they were."

"You might have known that they would be Bobolinks," put in Junior's father, Young Chips. "The male Bobolinks, pebbled in the spring, look quite different in the fall you know—the females are brownish and streaked and the males are yellowish, with striped backs."

"I know now, anyway," admitted the young bird ruefully. "I was embarrassed when I found out. Mercy, what's happening!" he interrupted himself to exclaim. "Why, Pop, we're absolutely surrounded by chattering birds! Just look at them—and listen."

"Help, Mother!" another of the young Chickadees was calling to Merry Chickadee. "Who are all those birds that have arrived so suddenly?"

"Now, don't get excited children!" counselled Young Chips. "It's just a migration of Warblers. There certainly are a lot of them, I'll admit. And it seems funny in all this rain, too. Let's just be calm and listen to what they are saying and see whom we know."

"I see a number of Black and White Warblers and some Yellow Warblers," announced Merry. "But who is that one there, with the yellowish and olive coloring—and oh, there's another with a bluish back and yellow breast!"

"And I see another Red-breasted Nuthatch with the party," called Junior loudly. "What's he with them for?"

"I heard you, young man," the little Nuthatch answered him. "I'm travelling southwards with this anti-hawk convoy because I'm going south anyway and I like them, and besides, it's much safer to travel with a crowd. All the migrating birds are getting restless with the cold weather that we had a few days ago and are beginning to move. Oh, pardon me, here we go again. If we're to talk any more you'll have to follow us down the line a bit." So saying, he flew off quickly.

A few moments of noise and confusion, with birds flying by the dozens in and out of their clump of trees and then the Chickadees and Nuthatches were left alone again. As suddenly as they had come, the convoy had gone on.

"Now, wasn't that exciting?" chirped Junior Chickadee noisily. "How many different kinds of Warblers did you recognize, Mother?"

"Not very many, I'm afraid," admitted Merry. "It's hard to see the birds with the leaves all on the trees, and then when you do see them it's terribly hard to identify the different kinds, because of so many of them being young birds.

"Yes, it's much easier to tell who's who in the spring," agreed Hattie Nuthatch. "Then there are only the adult plumages to be seen—and you can be pretty sure of your birds. Now, it's different. So many of the young ones have indefinite plumages or costumes that are different from their parents'."

"I found it most annoying to get a glimpse of someone I thought I knew and then find that he wouldn't stay still long enough for me to see him properly," complained Young Chips. "It's tantalizing to see people when you don't know for sure who they are."

"For goodness sake, who's that right beside us there in the next tree?" asked Nutty Nuthatch suddenly.

"Is it a Phoebe?" inquired Hattie. "I can just see its back and head and it certainly looks like one."

"No, I can see that his throat and upper breast are grey and his underparts yellow, and when he flutters just then I saw that his tail was brownish red on the under-side," Nutty told her. "Oh, well then—it must be Cresty, the Great Crested Flycatcher, because he's the only Flycatcher colored like that," said Hattie. "And, of course, I should have noticed that he was much bigger than the Phoebe, too. It is hard to tell the Flycatchers apart though."

"I think I'll go down in the direction that those birds went and see if I can catch up to the convoy again," Junior was telling his parents. "I thought it was terribly thrilling seeing them all."

"Yes, I haven't found myself in the middle of a migration like that for several seasons," said Young Chips. "Your mother and I will be here when you get back. Personally, I think it's too wet for flying about much. If you should happen to meet Red-eye, the Red-eyed Vireo, just tell him that I'll be looking him up when the weather gets fine. If you hear a bird giving a short, rather whiny call, almost like Kitty Catbird's call, that will be Red-eye. I don't expect him to be giving his regular warble like Rob Robin's at this time of year."

"I'll listen for him," promised the young Chickadee as he flew off. "But I'm more interested in finding the Warblers again."

"He's a bright boy," Young Chips murmured proudly to Mrs. Young Chips, as they resumed their afternoon snack.

The funeral service was held on Saturday, Aug. 31, at Queensville United church, following a short service at his late home. A former pastor, Rev. A. M. Partidge of Beaverton, conducted the service, and preached from the text, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

The choir was in attendance and a fine selection, "There Is No Night There," was rendered by the quartet.

The interment was made in Queensville cemetery. The pallbearers were Stanley Eves, John Kellington, Wm. Holborn, Peter Arnold, Edward Cole and Chas. Rye.

Mr. Cole leaves to mourn his loss his widow and one daughter, Melvina (Mrs. A. Travis), Queensville. A son, Alonzo, predeceased him 29 years ago. He also leaves two grandchildren, Melville Travis, Queensville, and Mrs. Verne Smith, Sharon, five great-grandchildren and one brother, Albert M. Cole, of Ravenshoe.

He was born in King township in 1862 and spent most of his life at Ravenshoe and Queensville.

In 1882 he married Eliza Ann Crouch. He was a member of Ravenshoe United church and the superintendent of the Sunday-school for a number of years.

The Common Round

LONDON

By Isabel Inglis Colville

I don't suppose there is a man, woman or child, to whom the word "London" doesn't mean something. When I was a small girl, kittens were my constant companions and it was through my love for cats that I first heard about London.

"Pussy cat, pussy cat, where have you been? I've been to London. To look at the queen."

Mother would sing this song to me—and sing it not once—but many times, until, between hearing that rhyme, and looking at a picture book, depicting a family of cats living in a west end London mansion—said mansion boasting gilded chairs and cloth of gold hangings, it was no wonder that my childish imagination ran riot and London, to me, was a city of gold.

Also I always thought there must be a particular kind of cat that lived in London, like Dick Whittington's and the pussy of the nursery rhyme.

And, then, later, we children played "London Bridge is falling down," and joined in the round "London's Burning," till London became as familiar a name as my own home town.

When I got to be old enough to read Dickens, I felt, as I've felt ever since, that no place in London would seem strange to me. I felt sure I'd meet the prototypes of Micawber, David Copperfield, the Cheeryble Brothers, Aunt Betsy, Bill Sykes, Mr. Pickwick and all the characters Dickens has immortalized.

I felt I could go to Rugby and meet Tom Brown and Doctor Arnold, and in the tower of London, see in fancy, the ghosts of the murdered princes, of Anne Boleyn, and that some night, in Trafalgar Square, the statue of Nelson would whisper of how he kept the seas in Britain's time of need, and how his spirit still hovers over the waters he guarded so well, and wafts his word to out!

He moved to Union Street in 1923 and was a member of Queensville United church and elder of the church till his death. In politics he was a Liberal.

POLICE COURT

TWO SLOT-MACHINE OPERATORS FINED

Magistrate W. F. Woodliffe fined Albert Waxer, Jackson's Point, $50 and costs of $12, or 60 days in jail, in Newmarket police court on Tuesday. Mr. Waxer, the proprietor of a refreshment booth known as "The Red Spot," was charged with having a gaming house.

Constable W. E. Martindale testified that on Aug. 16, in company with Constable Alan Wallace and with a search warrant, he entered the premises of Mr. Waxer. He said that he played the slot-machines he found there.

"I placed a nickel in one of them and received three nickels in return," stated the officer. "Does the operator depend on skill in order to win?" asked Crown Attorney N. L. Mathews, K.C.

"No," answered Constable Martindale. "He depends entirely on chance. The operator puts a nickel in the slot and pulls down the lever."

Constable Martindale explained that upon receiving a certain winning combination of numbers the player gets money as a prize.

"How many machines did you find?" asked Mr. Mathews. "Two," was the answer.

Constable Alan Wallace corroborated Constable Martindale's testimony. He said that he noticed that one woman who was playing received coins "rather frequently."

Mr. Waxer admitted having the machines but said they belonged to a company. He said that he received a commission on them.

"I declare these machines to be gaming-machines within the meaning of the law," said his worship. "I order them to be confiscated together with their contents."

Howard Levere, proprietor of a restaurant running under the name of "Lavalette's" at Jackson's Point, was fined $100 and costs of $12 or three months in jail, on a similar charge.

Constable Alan Wallace testified that he had gone into the restaurant in order to purchase a soft drink. "I noticed a number of people operating a slot-machine in the alcove of the hotel," he stated. "I played and received four five-cent pieces."

"How were the machines operated?" asked the crown attorney. Constable Wallace explained how, on placing a five-cent-piece in the slot of the machine and pulling down the lever, three drums with various designs on them rotated.

He said that upon getting a certain combination of designs the operator received money as a prize and that the operator depended purely on chance and not on skill. He stated that there was another machine which was played in a similar manner but the player had to use a 25-cent-piece in order to play.

He said that he left the restaurant and reported the machines to Constable Martindale. Constable Martindale stated that he had seized two five-cent slot machines and one 25-cent one.

Magistrate Woodliffe ordered the machines, together with their contents, confiscated.

Charges of failing to register, in accordance with the Defence of Canada Regulations, against Joseph Seibert and his son, Martin, Holland Landing, were dismissed.

Two men, naturalized Canadians, stated in testimony given in police court three weeks ago, that they had never lived under the German Reich. They said that they were Yugoslav by birth and origin.

Mr. Seibert, Sr., testified that he and his ancestors lived in that part of Yugoslavia which at one time belonged to Austria-Hungary and after the last war was given to Rumania. Later this territory became part of Yugoslavia.

Magistrate Woodliffe stated that, as there was no Canadian regulation covering the position of people living in this part of Yugoslavia, he had to dismiss the case. He advised the men to register and "be on the safe side."

A charge of careless driving against Carl Anderson, Keswick, was dismissed when Mr. Anderson told the court that he had paid for damages done to Clark Harrison's bicycle when he ran over it with his truck. On a second charge, that of common assault, Mr. Anderson was bound over in the sum of $50 to keep the peace.

According to testimony given in a previous court session, Anderson was charged with pushing Harrison's head through the window of a refreshment booth in Keswick.

Leslie O'Brien, Cazenovia, New York, was fined $10 and costs or ten days on each of two charges, illegal possession of liquor and careless driving.

Fred Williams, Musselman's Lake, testified that he had been driving a truck south on the Lake Shore road at Musselman's Lake at the time of the accident. He stated that he had been going downhill, well over to his own side of the road, when the American car, which was coming up the grade over the centre of the road, "crashed" into him.

He said the left side of his truck had been damaged and that he estimated this damage to be $50. "Did you have any conversation with the driver of the other car?" Mr. Mathews asked Mr. Williams.

"Yes," was the answer. "He tried to blame it on me for going too fast. He said that I was out too far on the road." Mr. Williams added that he had been standing beside Mr. O'Brien and smelled liquor on the accused's breath.

"Did he appear to be normal?" asked the attorney. "Yes," Mr. Williams replied.

Mortley Davis, Ballantrane, who was riding in the front of the truck with Mr. Williams, testified that the truck was well over to its right side of the road. He stated that the American car had been approaching on its wrong side of the road, but that as it came near it swerved out. "If it had not swerved out, it would have crashed us head on," he stated.

Arthur Vine, Musselman's Lake, said that he arrived shortly after the accident and found the truck standing close to its own side of the road. He added that the American car was over the centre line.

Constable Robert Windsor, who investigated, stated that he had found a bottle of gin, partly consumed, in the back of O'Brien's car. He said that he did not smell liquor on the accused's breath and that he found him in a normal condition.

Mr. O'Brien, in his own defence, stated that he had driven up a sharp left turn under 20 miles an hour, and that the truck, which was going at about 30 miles an hour downhill, had to put on its brakes suddenly and therefore swerved. He admitted being about a foot over the centre of the road, but said that the other car had plenty of room to get by.

"I am satisfied that you were driving on the wrong side of the road," said his worship.

The accused pleaded guilty to the charge of illegal possession of liquor. The bottle of gin was ordered confiscated.

Albert Van Stone, Cannington, charged with drunken driving, was allowed out on bail of $500. The accused man must appear in court in two weeks. Bail was supplied by Mrs. Albert Van Stone.

Magistrate W. F. Woodliffe heard 31 speeding charges in Newmarket police court, here on Tuesday. A number of these cases were adjourned, as some of the police constables are on their vacations.

James A. Elliott, Toronto, 45 m.p.h., $8 and costs, Constable Fisher Dunham, Aurora.

Cecil Cox, Guelph, 45 m.p.h., $5 and costs, Constable Fisher Dunham. Mr. Cox, who appeared to answer the charge against him, denied that he had been driving over 30 m.p.h. He said that he stopped in the town to visit a friend's house.

He stated that he had been going 42 miles an hour on the Aurora highway and that as he entered Aurora he noticed the sign there and slowed down to 30 m.p.h.

"But the officer timed you as you were leaving Aurora, not as you were entering," said his worship.

"Do you remember how fast you were going when you were leaving Aurora after your visit to your friend's?" asked Crown Attorney N. L. Mathews, K.C.

"I don't remember a thing about it," replied Mr. Cox.

Alfred Wade, Toronto, was fined $8 and costs for speeding in Newmarket.

Two Toronto motorists, who were exceeding the speed limit through Sutton, were each fined $8 and costs. They were Alfred C. Walker and Gavin K. Burns.

Constable Joseph Jardine, East Gwillimbury, had five convictions. I. Kriss, Toronto, was fined $10 and costs for going 50 miles an hour through Sharon.

Albert Mason, Mount Dennis, was fined $6 and costs. Three Toronto motorists, John Craven, John Hamilton, and Raymond L. Powers, 60 m.p.h., were each fined $5 and costs.

All of Constable Carl Morton's convictions were against Toronto motorists for speeding in North Gwillimbury. Ashley and Crippen, 50 m.p.h., on the Lake Shore road, $10 and costs (speed limit 30 m.p.h.). William Milligan, 45 m.p.h. on the Lake Shore road, Edliff and Co. Ltd., and George P. Powers were each fined $8 and costs. Douglas Wilson and Harry D. Philp, were each fined $5 and costs.

Gordon D. Campbell, Toronto, charged with speeding on the Lake Shore road, denied that he was going over 50 m.p.h. "I won't swear that I was going under 45 m.p.h. though," stated the accused.

"You know this is a 30 mile area?" asked Magistrate Woodliffe.

"Yes," answered Mr. Campbell. "Then why do you drive at 45 miles an hour?" asked his worship. "You know there are a great many people walking along that road? I'll take your estimate of speed—not that I think the officer is wrong—but I am giving you the benefit of the doubt. I fine you $8 and costs and see that you watch your speed in the future."

A charge of speeding, against Toronto Launderers Ltd., was dismissed. Gordon Budgen, driver of the truck, denied being on the Newmarket-Sutton road at the time the charge stated.

Constable Alex McCallum testified that he was sure of the identity of the truck and that Constable William Hill was present with him at the time. He said that Constable Hill was on his vacation at the present time and therefore was not present in court.

"I will dismiss the charge, giving you the benefit of the doubt," his worship told Mr. Budgen.

A charge of speeding on the Lake Shore road, against J. H. Beatty, Woodstock, was also dismissed. Mr. Beatty stated that his cottage was on the west side of Lake Simcoe, and that he had been returning from Barrie at the time in question. He denied being on the east side of the lake at the time the charge stated.

Constable Carl Morton of North Gwillimbury laid the charge.

HOME-DRIED FRUIT MAY BE CANDY SUBSTITUTE (Contributed by Elma M. Starr, Bogartown)

A piece of sweet pear, plum or peach dried is good to nibble at, and a good substitute for candy—for adults as well as children, if chewed well.

When sugar is high, and fruit cheap, the drying method has various advantages. Properly dried fruit, if stored in a dry, clean place and kept covered from insects will keep well and is more easily transported for relief purposes than canned goods.

To dry peaches and plums—wipe fruit and cut in halves and place cup side up on pie plates or baking sheets. Dry in oven or set on top of kettles when cooking other things—or put over hot air register or radiator.

To dry pears—the skin should be removed. Apples should be peeled and cut into medium-sized pieces and these sliced laid closely on pan to dry and turned over occasionally.

Corn, cooked enough to set the milk, then cut from cob and spread on buttered pans, may be dried too.

For table use these dried products should be soaked in cold water for several hours, then cooked slowly until tender, then sweetened or salted to taste.

SNOWBALL

HEAR STORY OF EARLY DAYS IN KETTLEBY

The Snowball W.I. members were the guests of Mayor and Mrs. J. M. Walton at Brunswick Hall, the grand old home of the Walton family since 1875, at their last meeting.

Their host, in his own genial way, gave the ladies a very interesting story of the building of the home, also the history connected with the antiques, which he has made it his hobby to collect from far and near. One article of special mention was a marble table from Rome. He also told of industries connected with the village carried on in the early days.

The draw was made for the Red Cross quilt by Mrs. Walton, the lucky ticket being held by Douglas Harrison of the third concession of King.

Everyone sat down to a very bountiful supper with their host and hostess. A very nice treat of watermelon was enjoyed, which Mr. Walton had kept in reserve for this event. God Save the King brought the enjoyable afternoon to a close.

AURORA INDUSTRIAL SITUATION MOST ALARMING -- MAYOR

ATTEMPTS TO GET NEW INDUSTRIES ARE UNSUC-CESSFUL SO FAR

"The industrial situation is the most alarming in Aurora for many years," said Mayor J. M. Walton to a public meeting on Friday evening.

"Our oldest industry will soon be closed," he said, "and our other industries have not received many war orders yet. Many of our people are driving from 50 to 75 miles a day to work out of town and return. We have had a small committee of Mr. Fisher and Mr. Archie Cousins and myself working quietly to get some new industries, but as yet nothing definite has been achieved."

"We have tried our best and we would like this meeting to change the committee or if you approve our actions we would like you to suggest plans and add others to our committee."

Mr. Fisher told of numerous interviews and letters written, and outlined one or two negotiations that appeared hopeful.

"Just this week I have secured a sale price and a rental price for the whole and parts of the Fleury-Bissell plant," said the mayor disclosing the figures. "We have been held up because we didn't have this before. Perhaps now we can negotiate better."

"What about Ottawa, they should be able to do something for us," asked Councillor E. J. Henderson. (Page 8, Col. 5)

SEPTEMBER SALVOS

Bill Wilkison, the curly-headed sparkplug of Aurora juniors a few years back and then a performer with Young Rangers and Pamour Seniors, has been holidaying at his Newmarket home, and of course paying a great deal of attention to Aurora.

He looks in the pink, and looks forward to a good season this winter. Pamour have folded up like Kirkland Lake Blue Devils and Bill will be with Hollinger. The group will include McIntyre, Buffalo-Ankorie, and possibly a fourth entry. Players are plentiful this season up north and only the best form from down south will do.

Whit White, the old twinkletone of the Aurora outfield, has turned his hand, or perhaps we should say feet, to the cinder-path, and last week annexed the sprints title for three of the five companies of the Duffs regiment. He will compete on the battalion team in the military championships.

Lees Owmn, prexy of the tennis club and ace singles player, is feeling pretty good about annexing the district title in his first year as head man. Lees played in the doubles too and only bowed to defeat once all season, that to Bruce Gould of Uxbridge, as he inspired his team-mates to new heights. He also played in men's A doubles. Before coming to Aurora he played intercollegiate for Toronto Varsity and inter-faculty for Victoria College.

The men's section of the team has been the forte all year, with the females none too steady. Bernard Cooper and Babcock, as well as Stan Walker, were all developed locally. Pretty soon the younger fry of the club will have their tournament and it is to such youngsters as Owen Richards and

O. L. ANDREWS IS STRICKEN, WAS ONLY 31 YEARS

The death occurred suddenly at Parry Sound hospital last Friday of Oscar Leonard Andrews, only son of Mrs. Andrews and the late M. L. Andrews, after a short illness.

About two months ago he accepted a position at Nobel, Ont., and was joined there by his family a few weeks ago. On Sunday, Aug. 25, he was taken to the hospital, suffering from pneumonia.

Mr. Andrews had lived practically all his life in Aurora, where he was one of the most popular young men in town. The past two years he had been associated with the Aurora General store.

Mr. Andrews was in his 31st year and was born in Newmarket. He received his education at Aurora public and high schools and Toronto normal school. He was the present president Noble Grand of Aurora I.O.O.F. No. 148, an honor held by his father before him. He was an enthusiastic member of the tennis club.

In 1937 he married Evelyn Grievens of Aurora, who, along with his young daughter, Catherine, two sisters, Misses Bertha and Marjorie, and his mother, Mrs. M. L. Andrews, of Aurora, survive him. His father died in May.

The funeral service was held on Sunday afternoon at Aurora United church, following a short service for the family at his late residence, Mill St. Rev. Dr. E. J. Thompson conducted the service. The pallbearers were: Earl Simmeron, Phil Findlay, Bert Wilson, Harold Lubbock, Asa Cook, and Willard Graham.

Gunton Protests Cheque

Councillor Dr. G. A. C. Gunton has filed notice with the town treasurer, C. A. Willis, and with three local banks that if a cheque for additional premium on the treasurer's fidelity bond is paid he will attempt to hold them liable.

"My position is clear in the matter," he told The Era. "The statutes speak for themselves. I am endeavoring to protect the ratepayers. This payment, in my opinion, is illegal."

Mayor J. M. Walton told The Era: "Although I have the backing of the majority of the council and, I feel, of responsible citizens in town, I will not participate in town business nor will I sign any cheques until this matter is cleared up."

"A definite legal opinion will be obtained. I hope for a speedy settlement."

Asked if this would mean that town employees would not be paid on Saturday, he said that he would be signing no cheques. Asked if anyone else would be nominated to sign cheques in the interim, he said that he didn't think so.

The payment which Dr. Gunton seeks to prevent was approved by the town council on Tuesday evening. The Era has no information whether or not the cheque, which would be in favor of the mayor, has been issued. Treasurer Willis, after receiving Dr. Gunton's letter yesterday, said that he would still sign the cheque.

Council Has Hot Session Over Raising Clerk's Bond

COUNCILLORS STUART AND GUNTON SCORE INSUR-ANCE TRANSACTION

After a hot debate and following a recorded vote which saw council split 5-3, Aurora town council finally approved payment of $21.01 on Tuesday, representing the balance due on a premium on Town Clerk Cedric Willis' fidelity bond, which was increased from $5,000 to $10,000 in June, the policy held as in former years with J. M. Walton, the present mayor, as agent.

This was the third occasion the matter has been before council. Acting as agent, Mr. Walton has held the fidelity bond for many years on the town officials. The policy on the town clerk has been $5,000 in the past. This policy was in effect when the mayor took

TAX RECEIPTS $2,332 AHEAD OF LAST YEAR

"I want to commend the citizens of Aurora on the splendid way they have paid arrears and current taxes," the finance chairman, Deputy-Reeve C. E. Sparks, told council on Tuesday.

The budget has been spent to the amount of 50.03 per cent in seven months, although the high school and county levies have not yet been paid, he explained. Current tax receipts are $2,332 ahead of last year and arrears have been $1,732.54 more paid in than in a like period in 1939.

The waterworks department has at this time $5,700 to its credit and the committee recommended that $3,000 be transferred from this account to the general fund.

"If we had a commission we could get over this sloppy way of financing the town," said the waterworks chairman, Councillor E. J. Henderson.

No heavy expenditures, with the possible exception of Centre St. paving, were foreseen for the rest of the year.

The mayor announced that Geo. Duffield thought he should be reimbursed for gasoline used in trips to Toronto in connection with the civil guard and military camp. The bill was left over until a further meeting, Councillor John Stuart saying, "I think we should send this bill to the government. We pay enough taxes and this was really government business."

With the town truck not deemed in good enough shape to make a trip on the highway, council engaged the truck of B. F. Davis to transport Aurora war veterans to the C.N.E. The bill for $10 was passed.

Ask Town Employees As Special Traffic Constables

TOWNSFOLK MEET TO DIS-CUSS PARKING AND TRAFFIC PROBLEMS

Last Friday evening a well-attended public meeting was held in the town hall for the purpose of discussing community problems and for a round table talk on town affairs.

A. N. Fisher, president of the Aurora board of trade, was chosen as chairman, while Councillor A. J. G. Wilson acted as secretary. In opening the meeting Mr. Fisher stressed that it was not a meeting of the board of trade, but of the citizens as a whole.

"There are certain matters that should be discussed freely and certain facts laid before the people," he said. "We want a free discussion of affairs."

Mayor J. M. Walton told the gathering the traffic problem, the industrial situation and military matters were some of the things that needed discussing at length.

"Council has hesitated taking any steps on the traffic problem until now it will soon be fairly well over, but we would like the wishes of the people known in order that we may be guided," he said. He criticized the methods used by buses in unloading passengers and freight, and also the manner in which commercial vehicles, particularly beverage and fruit trucks, "cluttered up" Yonge St. as they made deliveries. Double parking, and parking in front of the stores on Friday and Saturday nights were also scored.

Mr. Fisher presented a four-point resolution which dealt with double parking, wholesale deliveries to the stores, 30-minute parking on Yonge St. on Friday and Saturday night, and bus traffic.

"Merchants are losing business because people can't get to the stores because of lengthy parking," stores because of lengthy parking," space, but it is never used."

"Most of the parking trouble is caused by local people hogging the main street," said one business man.

"We tried the half-hour limit some years ago and the merchants were the first to complain," said another.

"It's no use passing by-laws un-

GUILD MEETS

The co-operative women's guild met on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. G. Baldwin, Temperance St. The program committee included Mrs. N. Thompson, Mrs. C. Spence and Mrs. L. Chapman. The luncheon committee was composed of Mrs. Robt. Hodgkinson, Mrs. T. C. McLeod, Miss J. Patrick and Mrs. J. Stuart.

Jeas you put some teeth in them and then enforce them," said Councillor Dr. G. A. C. Gunton.

"Most of the points are covered by the highway traffic act — the trouble is with the police commission. They don't enforce any by-laws," said Dr. C. J. Devins.

"Last year we were criticized for being too severe with traffic," said the mayor. "Chief Dunham does his best, but he is only on at rush hours and night."

"Why can't town employees like Jim Goulding, George Walker and Mr. Langman be empowered to enforce whatever traffic violations they see," asked Dr. C. J. Devins, a suggestion that met with general approval.

"You can't expect town employees to have much time for that," said Councillor John Stuart. "The real problem is that if we're to improve the traffic situation we need a full-time day constable and in uniform too. Are the taxpayers prepared to spend another mill on the tax rate to do this?"

Pros and cons of parking and the other matters were finally handed over to the council to deal with, and a recommendation was forwarded that town employees be made special constables to help enforce whatever resolutions are adopted and the by-law be made workable.

"We must not drive trade from town, but something must be done," said Mr. Fisher.

TOO MANY COOKS

BY ALICE DYAR RUSSELL

"I've nothing for you!" Arthur McComb spoke crisply and swung on his heel.

The dejected figure in front of him did not move.

"Nothing, I tell you!" repeated Arthur angrily, turning back. He gave the petitioner a sharp look. "See here, didn't I see you down in the city the other day when I was interviewing applicants for cook?"

"Yes."

"Maybe you wrote that letter I got this morning?" sarcastically.

"Yes."

"Oh, you did, eh? Not such a bad letter at that. But I've all the men I need."

"I'd do anything," said the man imploringly. "Anything! You could find something for me, if you wanted, in all this layout." He gestured jerkily at the peeling scene around them: buildings in the process of construction; a steam shovel on the road; a steam shovel in operation; men unloading barrels of water from a truck.

"I wash dishes—I'd do anything!"

"I've hired my cook's helper," replied Arthur impatiently. "Anyway, I want younger men than you. Why must you be—?" His eyes rested mercilessly on the bent shoulders under the frayed shirt, the knotted hands, and the ragged gray beard—"past fifty!"

The man did not answer, but stirred his feet uneasily among the fragments of rock on the ground where they were standing halfway up the side of a steep, ore-filled chocolate and rust-colored mountain, high above the floor of the desert. The air was hot, dry, scented with sage. "Digging, then," he said doggedly, his face a grayer mask.

"You'd collapse in half an hour," Arthur told him, not unkindly. "This desert heat is something fierce. If you're not used to it, you look like a man who's lived in cities—soft."

"I've worked most everywhere," returned the man dully. "I'd like it out here, where it's open. Can't you—?"

"No, I can't, and that's flat!" Arthur spoke with stark finality. "I don't want you hanging around here, either! You right-about-face and go back to where you came from! Get that?"

The man stood motionless for an instant, then, without a word, turned and hurried off. Arthur watched him as he made his way unskillfully down the angling path to the road, plunged along until he reached a jutting hump of mountain, disappeared behind it. Misgiving gnawed at Arthur's unseasoned heart, but the young man cast it aside. "Can't give work to every bum that asks for it," he muttered. "Turning men away was part of his job."

This job of his was new enough to be enthralling. At twenty-six, for a swarm of applicants, he had been picked for superintendent by Jared Court, owner of the Roxana Mines Limited, shortly to be put into operation. His task was to oversee the erection and the equipment of bunk houses, kitchen and dining room, to provide lighting and water systems, and meantime to run the commissary.

It was no sinecure. If he had not known that at the start, he had found it out within a week. Numberless problems beset him; as soon as one was solved, another cropped up speedily. The men at work must be housed and fed in tents until the buildings were completed. While the well was being dug and the pipes laid, water must be hauled from a spring six miles away and doled out sparingly. All supplies had to be brought from town, over twenty-five miles of road that had been at the opening of the enterprise well-nigh impassable.

Arthur had thought that the commissary would be the easiest part to handle; he found it the most difficult. Men will not be contented and work well unless they are satisfied with their meals. The first cook whom Arthur had hired through a city agency was a trained chef who expected every modern convenience. His sensitive nerves had been in a state of shock from the time he was driven up the steep, curving mountain road that overhung rocky chasms. Making acquaintance with water in a barrel instead of in a faucet, with a kerosene stove that alternately balked and spouted showers of soot, with a dank pit stored with ice in place of an electric refrigerator, brought tears of anguish to his Gallic eyes. He was able to roast meat fit for a king, and his delicate buckwheats brought him rounds of applause; but he lasted only four days. In the first car to leave camp after his arrival, he vanished down the side of the mountain and was seen no more.

Arthur scouted desperately in every direction, determined that this time he would find a man familiar with primitive conditions. He finally secured from a road camp back in the mountains his second cook, a short, dumpy, sly-looking man, with moist hands and little pig eyes. He proved altogether too willing to put up with primitive conditions; he rapidly made them more primitive. He was lazy and slovenly beyond belief. Glasses went on the table unwashed; potatoes were fried in rancid, ancient fat; hash and soups were mere unsavory accumulations of stale food. The men, many of them young college chaps accustomed to decent standards of living, howled in indignation.

Confronted by the possibility of a deserted camp, Arthur made hasty and whole-hearted arrangements for the slovenly one's departure; then, leaving the mountain regretfully even for a day, he drove to the city, visited employment agencies, and personally interviewed cooks of all kinds and degrees. It was here that he had first seen the man with hollow eyes and dejected mien, who would not take no for an answer, but had followed him afterward to camp, still mildly but persistently begging for something—anything to do. Arthur had, from the first, brushed aside contemptuously his pretensions to competency as cook. The man did not look like a cook! He looked, Arthur thought, like a failure.

Pete was the one whom he had hopefully brought back to preside over the kerosene stove, the water barrel, and the ice pit—Pete, tall, rawboned, muscular, with a shock of red hair and a threatening eye. He had cooked in lumber camps, on ships, in restaurants, and boarding houses; he had been cook, Arthur was well compelled to believe, in the cradle. When he brought a swift, scornful order into the tent kitchen, when his first dinner was well prepared and quickly served, Arthur had drawn his first care-free breath for many days. Gladly he observed Pete's dictum that no snoopers were wanted in his kitchen, and kept out of his way. Arthur had plenty to supervise in other parts of the camp.

Not only did he keep his bodily presence away from the kitchen; but so far as possible he removed his mind from a consideration of the food bills. They showed an alarming rise. Arthur would not admit a graven spirit, but vowed inwardly he would have a rigorous interview with Pete as soon as they were settled in their new quarters. He was occupied in this interval with a thousand worries. A series of mishaps had struck the camp. The truck had been in an accident on the road and badly wrecked; a cave-in had occurred at the well; and the supply of gasoline had given out on the very day the new kitchen was to be opened up. Steam shovel, tractor and gasoline engine had stood idle for hours. This would be the day, Arthur thought in gloom and despair, that Jared Court must select for an inspection of progress at the camp!

During the course of it, to Arthur's relief, the great truck of the United Oil Company came lumbering up the last steep incline. He yelled to the cook. "Pete, bring out all the empty containers! Get everything filled up!"

Pete thrust his head out of the kitchen door. He was unshaven and his eyes were bloodshot. "I hear you, boss," he growled.

Jared Court viewed the man with distaste. "Cook satisfactory?" he inquired curtly.

"Quite, sir," replied Arthur briskly. He was not feeling brisk however. Mr. Court was eyeing a heap of kitchen refuse, thrown into the bottom of the canyon below them. "I'm going to have a man cart that away and bury it, sir," said Arthur hastily. "Things have been a bit upset these last few days."

"You'll be burying a good many loaves of bread," observed Mr. Court, and changed the subject. Arthur's ears were hot with mortification. "I'll jack up the wasteful fellow," resolved the young man grimly.

Passing the kitchen door, he said warningly to Pete, "Those tins labelled coal oil are filled with gasoline. Better move them back to the tool shed."

"Say, I can read, can't I?" answered the man belligerently.

"Well, keep your head screwed on, that's all!" Exasperated with Pete and his humors, Arthur hurried to overtake Mr. Court. He wanted him to look at the bunk houses. He had cause for pride there. The carpenters were well ahead of their schedule.

Mr. Court did not, as Arthur fervently hoped he would, leave camp before nightfall. He elected to stay until the next morning, so rendering formal with his presence the first dinner served in the new dining room.

Pete, his face fiery red, hurried in with huge dishes of meat, gravy and vegetables. He had taken time to shave in honor of the occasion, but a bloody cut on one cheek testified to the recklessness of his blade.

Mr. Court slipped at the dark brew of coffee in his thick white china cup and picked at the plate of heavy food gingerly. Arthur did not know what he dreaded, riot, or bloodshed, or poison in the plot; some uncanny stir in the atmosphere told him that trouble impended and that it emanated from red-haired Pete with the bristling eyebrows. He saw the men look slyly at their cook, and at each other, grins irresistibly stretching their faces. Something was in the wind. The men knew; he did not.

When the bread pudding was served, "Flavored with lemon, Pete?" loudly inquired one of the men, and choked on his glass of water. Nothing happened, however, and dinner came to an end. "That's over! I've lived through it and I'm more than ready to hit the hay!" Arthur came out of the tent where he had left Mr. Court and stood surveying his darkened domain. Most of the men had gone to bed, but the kitchen windows were bright squares still. The young man lifted his face and breathed deeply. So still it was that he heard plainly from some far slope the lonely barking of a coyote. From the gully below the kitchen came a faint scratching sound, made by some small marauding animal, he decided. Suddenly into the peace and quiet struck a murderous noise from the kitchen; the clatter of china accompanied by Pete's raucous

Mr. and Mrs. D. McClure and Joyce VanLoven were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Arnold, Queensville.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Madill of Petch's Corner and Mr. and Mrs. C. Peterson of Aurora had Monday night dinner at the home of Mrs. Gordon McClure.

Master Allan Gilbert of Stouffville spent a few days last week with his little cousins, Jimmy and Charlie Howlett.

Miss Joyce VanLoven attended a conference with some of the Newmarket Nazarene church folk at Apsley on the holiday.

Another quilt was quilted by members of the Willing Workers last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Elmer Starr. The occasion was also the 83rd birthday anniversary of Mrs. Mordecai F. Starr, who was present, and also put several stitches in this missionary quilt.

Mr. and Mrs. John McClure, Mrs. Gordon McClure and Mr. Orley McClure returned home a week ago Monday after spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. Donald Petch and family at Charlton Station. While Orley was visiting his uncle he shot a large-tenor piercing the night with wild strains.

Arthur drew his brows together. He debated going in to Pete and sobering his cheerful mood with a harsh statement of uncheerful facts; but he decided that his spirits were too worn out for the encounter. "To-morrow!" he promised Pete and himself with a yawn, and turned to his tent.

Out of the soundlessness of that first delicious hour of sleep, Arthur was torn as by the wrench of a giant's fist. Noise beat upon his ears; light blinded his eyes. He sprang out of bed, instantly awake.

A blaze of light outlined buildings, sharply and clearly. It flared on the faces of running men, accentuating their fright and the confusion of their movements. Flames were ascending in a rising pillar, but not, Arthur perceived with a gasp of immense relief, not from the roof or over it. The fire was in the open; already it was dying down. One man near it frantically shovelled on dirt and stones.

One group was struggling on the ground. Arthur was able to identify the long legs of the cook kicking wildly. Three men were trying to sit on him. Unerring, Arthur knew that if there was a culprit, this was he. He darted forward.

A hand on his arm pulled him back. "Let them alone," said a calm voice. "They're handling him all right. The man is drunk." It was Mr. Court speaking, completely dressed, perfectly composed as usual.

"Drunk?" cried Arthur, with furious incredulity. "No! He's crazy! There's no liquor in my camp!"

"He didn't need liquor," retorted Mr. Court, with cool amusement. "Didn't you catch on at dinner? One man gave it away. I've seen it happen before. Look on your cook's shelves for the lemon extract bottle—ninety per cent alcohol!"

He raised his voice, then as a man tore past with a bucket of water. "You idiot! You can't put out a gasoline fire with water!" He turned back to Arthur. "That one man over there had his wits about him. He's saved the camp. Bring him to me."

Men were gathering at the place where the fire had been. As Arthur came up, he heard fragments of excited speech which told him all he wanted to know. "Plumb loco, Pete was!—When it blew up, say, he dove out of that place yelling like he was crazy!—Here come this bird a-tearing—went in like a shot—drug her out, fire streaming all over 'im! The loon used gasoline—gasoline—get that? Lighted her up with a match!—We'd be eating breakfast on the cold ground. (Warn) for this Johnny-on-the-spot! Say, look at his hands!"

"I'll look," said Arthur sternly, and pushed them away. He leapt over the man sitting half collapsed on the ground beside a dully smoking mass, with his hands awkwardly in front of him.

"Who are you?" asked Arthur, his breath catching. "You!" he exclaimed, then, with the shock of dismay, "Where'd you come from? How'd you get here?"

The man essayed to rise. "I'll be going along," he said feebly. "You will not!" cried Arthur fiercely, clutching his shoulder, and wincing as the man winced. "Sorry! Shoulder burned?"

Arthur strove to curb his voice. Why should he feel anger at this man? Because he knew it should be directed against himself? "Where've you been living?" he demanded. "What's your name?"

"Down in the ravine a piece," answered the man, after a moment's hesitation. "My name's Bill Hartman. I-I been keeping myself." His head went up; defiance stiffened him. "More'n I could do below. Better'n living on a woman; better'n seeing—" he gulped—"my young ones go hungry. County'll look after them, me not there. I get along all right."

"On what, man?" groaned Arthur. "On what?"

"Your cook throwed away a plenty," explained the man, "I'd come up at night and poke around. That's how I was here tonight." "Swell cook I had," stated Arthur with deep bitterness. "I fancy I'll have a new one to-morrow. Come along! Mr. Court sent word that he wants you."

sized black bear on his uncle's farm.

EVERSLEY ORGAN DEDICATED GIVEN AS MEMORIAL

Everyone is glad to know that Mr. W. Shropshire is around again after an enforced rest.

Threshing has been in full swing, hindering the garnering of the harvest. Stook threshing is held up by the recent rains, and harvesting also, so the plows are having their mould boards polished.

Rev. J. Stewart Ferguson of Zephyr, Mrs. Ferguson, and Mrs. Mack Ferguson and Mrs. Bella Ferguson of Aurora called on their cousins at Scots Wha Hae and at Mrs. Gellatly's last Tuesday.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Britton Riddell, (nee Mary Ferris), on Tuesday, Aug. 27, in York county hospital. Everyone is proud of this addition to the population on the third, though they are really of Vaughan, as they live on the old Jas. Stewart farm, just over the town line.

The central frontal piece was a large cross covered with peach and red "glads," and was very beautiful.

Rev. M. E. Burch will be back from his vacation and service will be held in Eversley church next Sunday evening, Sept. 5, at 7 p.m. On the following Sunday, Sept. 15, anniversary services will be held morning and evening. The W.M.S. will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 18, at Miss Ferguson's and the missionary bazaar is to be packed. The day following is the autumn rally for Toronto presbytery, to be held in Glebe church, Toronto, and so Eversley church activities get under way again.

The Gillies family were a pioneer family from Scotland, and the young people attended Eversley school and the family belonged to Eversley Presbyterian church.

Mrs. James Gillies, a fine old lady who lived in her farm home near King during the summer, spent the winters with her son, Ralph, and daughter, Mrs. Smeltzer, in Toronto, since the death of her husband some years ago.

Mrs. A. W. MacLennan of Eversley farm had two old friends of school days visiting her over the weekend. They were Mrs. Powers and Mrs. Foster, two sisters, of Trenton.

The dedication service and organ recital in All Saints' Anglican church on Sunday were outstanding in their attendance and service. The fine new pipe organ, a gift from the Watson family in memory of their late father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. George Watson, was dedicated at the morning service.

Communion service also was held and the infant son of Rev. and Mrs. E. W. G. Worrall was baptized.

The evening service, consisting of the regular evensong, prayers and scripture, was largely the organ recital. At the console of the organ sat Dr. Robert Jaques, and contributed an evening of beautiful melody. The church was filled at each service, an average attendance of 200 being present.

The decorations were of gladioli, in red, pink and peach. The abundant supply of floral beauty and arrangement was provided by Harry Jarvis.

The owner of a racing car, driving along a country road, overtook an old man, and being of kindly disposition, offered him a lift. His passenger was tremendously impressed by the speed and luxury of the car, and to humor the old fellow he accelerated until they were travelling about 60 miles an hour. Suddenly the car skidded and crashed into a tree. The old man picked himself out of the ruins, filled his pipe, and remarked thoughtfully:

"That certainly was fine, sir, but there's one thing that puzzles me. How do you stop her when there ain't no trees about?"

Matter of Preference

The O. C. was annoyed because he'd given the Tommy leave to go to his mother-in-law's funeral. And now he'd learned the old lady wasn't dead. He demanded an explanation.

"Sorry, sir," said the private, "but I really didn't say the wife's mother was dead. I just said I'd like to go to her funeral."

6TH CON. N.G. and BASELINE
WILLOW BEACH WINS
SOFTBALL TROPHY

The weather has not been very promising recently for those who have not completed harvesting. The heavy rain of last Friday put many people back several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Verne Arnold (nee Olive Williamson) have returned from their honeymoon trip to the Pacific coast. Their friends and neighbors wish them the very best for the future.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Fairbairn, Miss Delilah Stevens and Mr. Bruce Fairbairn motored to North Bay and district and planned on visiting Mrs. Ross Storey (a former resident of the baseline).

Congratulations are extended to Willow Beach softball team, who won the cup this year. They defeated Pine Orchard last Wednesday evening by a large score. This team has been in the finals for a number of years since joining the league and missed it several years by only one run.

JACKSON'S POINT

By GOLDEN GLOW

How queer things turn out sometimes! Here the day after a picnic I'd better say—to Jackson's Point, along comes a request that Golden Glow write something about that very place!

The letter states that the writer used to go there in past years on the old Metropolitan railway, and has been there in "days of yore," to the far-famed Lennox picnic! The rising generation, I do not suppose, ever heard of the "Lennox Picnic" to Jackson's Point, but it certainly was "far-famed," and tremendous crowds used to attend, year after year; and well-known speakers of the day used to be on the program.

Ten or more bands used to be in attendance in the procession, all the way from Toronto to the park, and "T. Herb" used to shake hands with thousands of his admirers, and also greet them by name in most cases. It was always said of him that he never forgot a face, and the name that went with it!

But the Jackson's Point of those days seems to be a thing of the past! Colonel Lennox of the Irish Guards is no more—his son was killed in an auto accident, his wife has died since, and their beautiful home at Jackson's Point has passed into other hands.

There is a pavilion called Edgewater there now in the park, quite an imposing place, well kept and well ordered, I understand, beside the long government pier that makes such a safe little harbor for speed and sailboats, cabin cruisers and rowboats. I love to sit out on the pier and watch the young folk dive from the springboard. Many make use of the pier, but those who do not care for diving and deep water swimming can find a safe bathing-beach to the right-hand side in front of the Edgewater pavilion, shaded by beautiful willows. It certainly is a different shore from that on the left-hand side of the Point, where the rollers come in crested with foam, and you usually find a breeze blowing.

Jackson's Point is a very popular place and usually overflowing with pleasure-seekers—but yesterday, Labor Day, it was absolutely deserted, except for a very few. There are three pavilions for picnic parties, with tables and benches, and tea or hot water, if you take your own tea-pot, to be had at the pavilion.

It is usually taxed for space, but yesterday everybody must have taken the opportunity to attend Toronto exhibition, for as we listened to the car radio we heard it had been an exceptional day for visitors. In fact, we heard that early in the day the parking spaces inside the grounds had been occupied and folks were turned away to park outside the gates, and they were parked for as much as a mile beyond.

There are still the splendid summer homes on the Point that there used to be, but the flower gardens are more numerous and elaborate. The trees are so tall and grand—and beyond Edgewater pavilion the summer cottages stand amid beautiful pines and other overgreens. Cars go there over the holidays by the hundreds. It is a particularly popular spot. Jackson's Point and Island Grove are still there, flourishing more than ever in the old days, or as much; and I wonder I have never before written of either or both, for I have a deep affection for every place connected with Lake Simcoe.

two teams were excellent and drew good crowds. The sportsmanship was of a very high quality and means much to both. One could not help remarking on Pine Orchard's good sportsmanship at the last game. After all, it is what counts most in any game.

Cecil McNeill and Carson Fairbairn were the batteries in the final game, backed by good work on bases and in the field.

Miss Myrtle Stiles started at her new school on Tuesday, Sept. 3, at Black River school, Sutton line, north of Pefferlaw.

Friends and pupils are glad to see Miss M. E. Graham back at her duties at the baseline school.

Miss Mary Boles has entered St. Michael's hospital to train for a nurse. Her many friends wish her well in her new work.

HARDEN-ROLSTON BRIDAL IS PRETTY

Standards of pink and white gladioli decorated the altar and the pews of Trinity United church, Shelburne, last Saturday, when Margaret Edith Rachel Rolston, daughter of Mrs. Merle Rolston, became the bride of Alfred Zeb Harden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Zeb Harden of Newmarket.

Rev. H. O. Hutcheson officiated and Miss Doris McBride of Shelburne presided at the organ.

As the guests entered the church, Miss Doris Harden, sister of the groom, dressed in a long gown of orchid sheer, and Miss June Hill, Newmarket, in pink sheer, sang very sweetly, "O Promise Me," and during the signing of the register, "I Love You Truly."

Given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. John Rolston, of Shelburne, the bride looked charming in a gown of white tulle. Her veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a heart-shaped halo, decorated with
